Joe Manchin	7/31/2024	The Senate Energy Committee advanced legislation on a bipartisan 15-4 vote Wednesday to update permitting rules in an effort to speed the development of energy infrastructure and boost production of both clean energy and fossil fuels. But the bill authored by Chair Joe Manchin and top Republican John Barrasso of Wyoming sparked divisions among Democrats on the committee who disagreed on whether the mix of measures would undermine President Joe Biden's ambitious climate goals. The legislation would speed approvals for not just coal, oil and gas development — priorities for Republicans and Manchin — but also renewable energy, critical mineral mining projects, and the transmission lines that Democrats favor to help spread the growth of wind and solar. It also rebukes Biden's pause on issuing new natural gas export permits, limiting the Energy Department to a 90-day review of new LNG projects, which would be automatically greenlighted if the deadline is missed.

H.R. 2882	Further Consolidated Appropriations Act 2024	Rep. Juan Ciscomani	3/23/2024	The Senate cleared a $1.2 trillion six-bill funding bundle in a 74-24 vote after midnight, following votes on a dozen Republican amendments and proposals, none of which were successful. The House approved the package earlier the day before, with more Democrats voting for the massive measure than Republicans as Speaker Mike Johnson faces a new threat to his gavel. As part of the deal to vote on passage of the package, Senate leaders agreed to hold a vote by April 19 on a bill from Sen. Mike Crapo (R-Idaho) that would bar the Biden administration from carrying out new EPA rules on tailpipe emissions. Before passage, the Senate defeated amendments that would block the release of special immigrant visas, bar the Biden administration from waiving sanctions on Iran and force DHS to detain immigrants accused of crimes like shoplifting. The Senate also rejected an amendment that would cut off federal funding for schools that allow transgender students to play on women's sports teams, as well as a proposal to bar immigrants accused of assaulting a law enforcement officer from becoming legal U.S. residents or citizens. Adoption of any amendments would have prompted a multi-day government funding lapse, since the package would be sent back to the House, which adjourned for a two-week recess. Senate Appropriations Chair Patty Murray (D-Wash.) opposed many of the amendments with the same message: "Just like the previous vote, this is a procedural vote that will cause a shutdown." The spending package could be the last government funding action seen in Congress for a while, at least until lawmakers are likely forced to pass a stopgap spending bill later this year that heads off yet another shutdown threat at the start of the new fiscal year on Oct. 1. With a presidential battle looming in November, serious work on funding bills for next fiscal year is unlikely until after Election Day.

Ken Calvert	2/6/2024	The House failed to pass a clean $17.6 billion Israel aid bill on Tuesday as Congress struggles to find some vehicle that could clear critical money for foreign allies. The measure to aid the U.S. ally in its war against Hamas went down 250-180, and was considered under an expedited procedure requiring two-thirds support. Nearly four dozen Democrats voted yes while more than a dozen Republicans opposed the measure. The White House had derided it as a "cynical political maneuver," as Republicans roundly reject a more comprehensive and bipartisan border security-foreign aid deal negotiated in the Senate. In a statement Tuesday, Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer reiterated his position that aid for Israel, Ukraine and Taiwan should move alongside border security changes.
